DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Steve Martin wrote Picasso at the Lapin Agile as the world was looking back on the 1900's and preparing to move forward into the 21st Century. In the play he introduces two of the most influential people of the last century, one an artist and one a scientist, both of whom feel that they are going to change the coming age, but are just not quite there yet. As Martin himself said in a 1996 interview concerning the play, "It's really about how exciting it is when you are on the verge of something."

Being "on the verge of something" concerns all of the characters. Each is, in their own way, looking for the next big thing, whether that next big thing is love, relationships, or defining the tastes of the masses. By showing Einstein and Picasso and contrasting them with Schmendiman, Martin is asking us to look to the future of our own new century. As we look to the next 100 years, what are we on the verge of...who will be the next Picasso or Einstein? What are you "on the verge of?" As Picasso says in play, "I hope I'm ready when the time comes to do it."
